According to a CareerBuilder.com survey, human resources managers receive, on average, 50 resumes per job opening. So a resume has to be pretty powerful if it's going to help you land an interview.

Follow these tips to keep your resume polished and packed with some punch, no matter how many times you've changed jobs in recent years:

 It's never a bad idea to have a second pair of eyes take a look over your resume, so consider having it reviewed by an expert.
